LOGLINE | SYNOPSIS

LOGLINE (11 words, 45 characters)

How to live in a world that conflicts with your ideals?

LOGLINE (17 words, 93 characters)

A traditional shepherd is forced to innovate in a neo-liberal world that conflicts with his idealistic views.

SYNOPSIS (61 words, 274 characters)

Shepherd Stijn has a romantic world view, but his idealism clashes with the harsh reality of having to be a modern entrepreneur. In this poignant and cinematic documentary we come close to Stijn and his family in their quest to keep the tradition of sheep herding alive. Will his struggle pay off or is he forced to go with the flock?

SYNOPSIS (187 words, 915 characters)

SHEEP HERO tells the story of Shepherd Stijn, an outspoken idealist who may have been born in the wrong place and era. He feels at home on the quiet heathlands tending his sheep, far away from today's hectic Western society. Stijn and his family fight to maintain their quiet and simple life, but this is proving to be increasingly difficult in a densely populated, modern world where the power of money and mass production outweighs good intentions and slow traditions. The family is heading towards a turning point: they can either continue their downward spiral or throw in the towel.

The documentary starts from the romantic idea of living a mindful life as a sheep herder, but then clearly reveals the frustration of a non-conformist who is only trying to live his own life. The beautiful images and storyline of the documentary clearly depict the constant physical and mental struggle of the protagonist as he tries to strike a balance between his ancient profession and being a modern-day entrepreneur. Stijn has to make a choice, does he keep on fighting the system or is there another option?

SYNOPSIS

SYNOPSIS (103 words, 542 characters)

Ten years ago, director Ton van Zantvoort became friends with one of the last traditional Dutch shepherds. Throughout the years he noticed how the relaxed and cheerful shepherd was becoming bitter and short-tempered. A traditional shepherd losing his hair overnight, because of extreme stress: what a paradox. Was herding sheep not supposed to be the most relaxed and romantic profession in the world?

"SHEEP HERO" is a 81-minute, poignant, cinematic documentary about a traditional shepherd who is forced to innovate in a neoliberal world that conflicts with his idealistic views. Will his struggle pay off or is he forced to go with the flock?

SYNOPSIS (294 words)

Ten years ago, director Ton van Zantvoort became friends with one of the last traditional shepherds in the Netherlands. He had a perfect life: a loving wife, a flock of sheep, and was living in nature as we all once did and often still long for. Throughout the years the filmmaker noticed how the relaxed, cheerful and passionate shepherd was becoming bitter and increasingly short-tempered. A traditional shepherd losing his hair overnight, because of extreme stress: what a paradox. Was herding sheep not supposed to be the most relaxed and romantic profession in the world? 'The silent heath is no longer quiet. There is a war going on in the heathlands' and so the story began.

Stijn's environment is closing in on him. In an overregulated society his quest for freedom is a struggle almost too hard to bear. His resentment is palpable, but there is also his stubbornness and determination to see it through to the end. He wants to keep his herd and the heathlands healthy and faces many obstacles along the way. Who looks out for the cultural heritage that is sheep herding? And are we able to salvage beauty amongst all our freeways and advancing industrial zones and suburbs. Life will be irrevocably different if the herd goes, as with it the craft will also vanish. Is it too late to save Stijn's dream?

With no voice-over and very little interviews, this 81-minute cinematic story is told in an observational cinema vérité style. Where Stijn goes, the camera follows and, as in direct cinema, we become unaware of the camera's presence.

The feature-length documentary shows the hardships of herding sheep in today's neoliberal world and the harsh reality of a contemporary entrepreneur trying to keep his business going. Anything but a dream job. Will his struggle pay off or is he forced to go with the flock?

*'They hardly touched your grass,
you whiner.'*

MAIN CHARACTER

MAIN CHARACTER (57 words)

Shepherd Stijn has chosen to live as a free man, supporting his family in an honest and sustainable way. Or so he thought. But modern neoliberal life has its demands and grinds him down bit by bit. What is left of his freedom, when he's constantly fighting to protect it? Is there a solution?

(alternative 163 words)

What is interesting about Stijn is that he is not your typical easy-to-like protagonist. He is a true idealist at heart. He believes in people looking out for one another, living in close connection with nature and being self-sufficient. However, he finds his pure, uncompromising way of life more and more at odds with the world around him. A world that is driven by money, technology and mass consumption.

A world that favours those who 'go with the flock' and makes it impossible for Stijn to realize his dream. Sure, Stijn is not a born businessman, but it is mainly this contrast between how the world should be and reality that has made him quite bitter. We see a man who is grumpy and jagged, but a loving father and husband at the same time. Stijn keeps at it, looking for new ways to survive and support his family. Trying to get by without losing yourself, isn't that what we are all doing?

(alternative 105 words)

We all have visions of a happy and free life. Shepherd Stijn is no exception. But unlike many others, Stijn followed that vision. He wanted to live off the land, honest and free, supporting himself and his family in a sustainable way, herding his flock of sheep on the empty heathlands. But in our neoliberal times all space for freedom seems to be eaten up both by European food regulations and by the free market. Stijn feels the fences of life closing in. The only space left is his inner freedom. But he never learned how to handle his anger and bitterness. Is there yet another, final escape?

'Times change.'

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT (522 words)

Ten years ago I became friends with Stijn, one of the last traditional shepherds in the Netherlands. He had a perfect life, a loving wife, was living in nature as we all once did and often still long for. Throughout the years however, I noticed how the relaxed, cheerful and passionate shepherd became bitter and increasingly short-tempered. A traditional shepherd losing his hair overnight, because of extreme stress. How paradoxical. Was herding sheep not supposed to be the most relaxed and romantic profession in the world? 'The silent heath is no longer quiet. There is a war going on,' Stijn said to me and so the story began.

We live in a world that is defined by economic laws and this has penetrated deeply into one of the most romantic professions in the world. How does Stijn deal with the frustration of losing control over his existence?

In many ways I am like Stijn. We both live in a world that is at odds with our ideals. I too chose an insecure, creative existence because of my ideals. I am passionate, emotional and also feel outrage against the injustice in the world. In my own way I try to contribute to a better world by making films about these topics. I too experience the tension, pressure and stress that Stijn has, having a family to take care of. I too am a small entrepreneur who cannot escape innovation. Wouldn't we all like to go back to nature, to real life, to what it's all about? But how far should you go to try and realise your ideals? And isn't it easier to just follow the herd?

I see the world around me as a visual, narrative source. Looking at, wondering about and consciously experiencing what is happening around me is a feeling I am trying to instil in the audience. As a filmmaker I look for themes that may seem to only represent small and everyday issues, but I use them to discuss bigger, universal themes. Not in order to make a didactic statement but to encourage viewers to think about themselves, about the world we live in and about what binds us as people.

My films are about people I meet; about the world we live in and how small it has become. Looking back at my films, many protagonists share the same motivation. They are all trying to live and realise their dreams. People who hold up a confronting mirror to us in our relatively carefree existence. These people who suffer the consequences of our capitalist economy, which can only be maintained if there is sufficient growth and profit. That's why we have to always consume more and produce quicker. It is a paradigm of infinite growth on a finite planet. The unabated global economic growth with its large-scale destruction of global ecosystems, which brings financial gain to only few and high social costs to many, is no longer tenable. Although a growing number of people realise this, there are only few who actually do something about it. People who go against the current, or strive for their ideals, regardless of the cost. This is what appealed to me when I met Stijn. He made a conscious choice for a different, more sustainable lifestyle. But is such a lifestyle still an option in our current society?

'Large-scale food producers are cutting down on the environment and animal welfare.'

'Men are replaced by machines. They win with cheap production.'

With great humanity, van Zantvoort shows us a different world in which all human life is valuable. In his lyrical documentaries with socio-economic overtones he usually resists the temptation of doing interviews. His work is original and testifies to a great effort of will by the maker. The vision of a Western civilized person who holds up a mirror to us. A confronting mirror, but one that invites you to take a long good look.

FAQ | TRIVIA

1. How long did the project take?

10 years ago I became friends with Stijn. From start to finish it took more than 8 years. We shot over the course of two years. Editing took two years, spanning 80 different versions and 2 picture locks. We did many test screenings with different audiences.

2. Why did you choose this way of storytelling?

I wanted to tell the story in an observational cinema vérité style, without a voice-over and with very little interviews that would explicitly emphasize the point I am making. We are very close to Stijn and as in direct cinema we become unaware of the camera's presence. I didn't want to tell the story too obviously, but rather give the audience the sense that they are discovering the story themselves and with it the heart of the film.

3. What point do you want to make?

Is it possible in our neoliberal world not to follow the flock and to what extent? And if we choose to live differently, is it worth the fight? In the film Stijn discovers that shepherds are being recognized as intangible cultural heritage. But what good is that if they are 30K short each year? Towards the end of the film our seemingly traditional shepherd is being 'exhibited' on a TV show called 'Weirdos', in an episode about bygone times. What do we really think is important in our society?

4. Did you make conscious artistic choices?

Everything is by choice. I wanted the audience to feel Stijn's stress and get close to him. I explicitly shot with a wide lens, an 1.7 aperture with lots of DOF and handheld to capture the constant movement and tension of the situation. To emphasize this tension, the film is recorded in twilight whenever possible. The sun is only shining in the beginning, but in the rest of the film there is rain, snow, fog, wind and darkness. Most weather effects such as rain and snow were added in post. During writing I already knew I wanted to color grade everything in a 'sky on fire / blue and orange' complementary color contrast which underscores the tension and oppression.

5. What was your luckiest shot?

I feel quite lucky with many scenes, as most of the film unfolded as I had anticipated in the years before. For example in the script I wrote "Besides Anna's husband and father of Midas and Artuur, Stijn in a way is still a child living with his parents. His parents have to clean up his mess." In the film Stijn is fined because a few sheep droppings were left on the pavement in front of an ice cream parlor. As mom is sweeping up the droppings with a hand brush, the police are writing a report. I do think it has a lot to do with having the nose for being at the right place at the right time. I can't tell anything about the ending, but I am also satisfied with that.

6. Any challenges during the making?

To show that herding sheep isn't as romantic as we think, I deliberately focused on Stijn's moments of stress during shooting. The result however was, when people saw the first rough cut (with Stijn yelling and stressing most of the time), they were taken aback by that side of Stijn. I love Stijn and understand his behavior but the viewers didn't feel for him the way I wanted them to feel. A struggle during the editing was to create the exact right balance in Stijn's character: loving and passionate shepherd on one hand, burned out and angry entrepreneur on the other.

Step right up, folks.'

A man wearing a hat and a light-colored shirt stands in a field of sheep. The scene is captured at sunset or sunrise, with a warm, golden light illuminating the landscape. The sheep are scattered across the field, and the background shows a line of trees and a body of water under a hazy sky.
